

Notes on Contributors

Ferenc ANDRÁS, born in 1963, is a PhD student at the Doctoral School in Philosophy, University of Pécs, Hungary. He is the founder and president of the Part-Oldalak Egylet cultural association, where he is engaged in editing films, including one on mobile communication (Mobilkommunikáció, 2005), and organizing a series of talks on democracy (Demokrácia-sorozat, 2007). Since 2002, he has held numerous courses at the University of Pécs on the history of philosophy, in 2006 he joined the mobile communication research group directed by Kristóf Nyíri, and he regularly gives talks at conferences on the philosophy of language, epistemology, and the philosophy of communication. He participates in the publication of a thematic series of volumes on philosophy, edited by János Boros. This series included a collection of studies on the semantics of pictures, on traditions, and on mobile communication (Képszemantika, hagyomány, mobilkommunikáció, Pécs: Brambauer, 2005). His major field of interest: the overlapping domains of analytical philosophy and the philosophy of communication. E-mail: andrasf@tolna.net.

Viktor BEDŐ is a PhD student at the Doctoral School in Philosophy, University of Pécs, Hungary. Between 2003 and 2006 he was Junior Research Fellow at the Institute for Philosophical Research of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. Research interests: philosophy of communication, tools of visual communication. Latest publications: “A mobilkommunikáció lehetőségei a tudomány és a társadalom közti párbeszéd alakításában” [Possibilities of mobile communication in shaping the dialogue between science and society], in György Fábri (ed.), A tudománykommunikáció értelme/értéke, Budapest: Tudástársadalom Alapítvány, 2006; “MMS of All Knowledge (MMSAK): Mobiles and Scientific Visualization”, in Kristóf Nyíri (ed.), A Sense of Place: The Global and the Local in Mobile Communication, Vienna: Passagen Verlag, 2005. E-mail: globalpattern@gmail.com.

András BENEDEK has published approximately 150 papers to date in connection with human resource development issues, among them the essay “New Vistas of Learning in the Mobile Age”, in Kristóf Nyíri (ed.),

Mobile Understanding: The Epistemology of Ubiquitous Communication, Vienna: Passagen Verlag, 2006. From 1976 to 1979 he studied systems analysis on a scholarship and acquired a PhD at the Academy of Sciences in Moscow. During the 1980s, he was a scientific advisor at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. He was the Director of Vocational Training (from 1984 to 1989), then Director General (from 1989 to 1990) at the National Pedagogical Institute. As its first Director General in 1990, he established the National Institute for Vocational Education. He was involved in numerous UNESCO and ILO projects. Dr. Benedek continues to participate in the preparation of various World Bank and PHARE projects in the area of human resource development. Between 1991–1998, as Deputy State Secretary, he was responsible for vocational education and training at the Ministry of Labour, and at the Ministry of Education between 1998–2002. Between 2003–2006, he was Permanent State Secretary at the Ministry of Youth and Sport, then at the Ministry of Cultural Heritage. Currently, he is Professor at the Budapest University of Technology and Economics, where he is Director of the Institute of Applied Pedagogy and Psychology. E-mail: benedek.a@eik.bme.hu.

Endre DÁNYI is a doctoral student at the Department of Sociology at Lancaster University. His research focuses on the political uses of various communication technologies and the ways in which political issues are materialized. Dányi's recent publications include "Xerox Project: Photocopiers as a Metaphor for an 'Open Society'", The Information Society, vol. 22, no. 2 (2006); "Internet and Elections: Changing Political Strategies and Citizen Tactics in Hungary", with Anna Galácz, Information Polity, vol. 10, no. 3-4 (2005). E-mail: e.danyi@lancaster.ac.uk.

Daniel L. GOLDEN is Junior Research Fellow at the Institute for Philosophical Research of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. Fields of interest: philosophy of communication and media, philosophy of science, and pragmatism. His publications include: "Cybertextualism", in P. Fleissner and Kristóf Nyíri (eds.), Philosophy of Culture and the Politics of Electronic Networking, vol. 2: Cyberspace: A New Battlefield for Human Interests, Innsbruck: Studienverlag / Budapest: Áron Kiadó, 1999. E-mail: golden@webmail.phil-inst.hu.

Zsuzsanna KONDOR, PhD, is Senior Research Fellow at the Institute for Philosophical Research of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. Some recent publications: "The Iconic Turn in Metaphysics", in Kristóf Nyíri (ed.), A Sense of Place: The Global and the Local in Mobile Communication, Vienna: Passagen Verlag, 2005; "Social Makeup and Solitary Reason", in S.

Laczkó and A. Dékány (eds.), Lábjegyzetek Platónhoz 4: A barátság, Szeged: Pro Philosophia Szegediensi Alapítvány / Librarius, 2005; “Being Mobile: Cognitive Multiplicity”, in Kristóf Nyíri (ed.), Mobile Understanding: The Epistemology of Ubiquitous Communication, Vienna: Passagen Verlag, 2006. Research interests: history of philosophy, philosophy of communication, the cognitive difference of pictorial and verbal representations and its impact on human thinking. E-mail: kondor@webmail.phil-inst.hu.

Kristóf KOVÁCS is a PhD student at the Department of Experimental Psychology, University of Cambridge. His areas of research are individual differences in intelligence and cognition, as well the evolutionary aspects of human variation. His main publications are: Kovacs K., K. C. Plaisted and N. J. Mackintosh, “Difficulties Differentiating Dissociations”, Behavioral and Brain Sciences 29 (2006); Kovács K., “Arthur Jensen és az IQ-vita 30 éve” [Arthur Jensen and thirty years of the IQ controversy], Magyar Pszichológiai Szemle [Hungarian Review of Psychology] 57 (2002); Gervain J., Kovács K., Lukács Á. and Racsmány M. (eds.), Az ezerarcú elme: Tanulmányok Pléh Csaba 60. születésnapjára [The thousand-faced mind: Tribute to Csaba Pléh at 60], Budapest: Akadémiai Kiadó, 2005. E-mail: kk340@cam.ac.uk.

István MARADI is the Chief Information Officer of Hungarian Telekom, and a PhD student at the Doctoral School in Philosophy, University of Pécs, Hungary. He had been influential in the launch of mobile services as the head of engineering at T-Mobile Hungary. His fields of research: the impact of mobile technologies on work, the analysis of mobile work, and convergences in technology. Some of his more important talks/publications: “Multimedia Content: Enabling New Growth”, Global Messaging conference, London, 2004; “Ügyintézés házon kívül...”, E-kormányzat conference, Siófok, Hungary, 2004; “Változó világban élünk”, Magyar Távközlés, January 2003. E-mail: istvan.maradi@t-email.hu.

Kristóf [J. C.] NYÍRI, born 1944, has studied mathematics and philosophy at the University of Budapest. He is Member of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences and of the Institut International de Philosophie. Was visiting professor in Austria, Finland, and the U.S., and Leibniz Professor of the University of Leipzig for the winter term 2006/07. His main fields of research are the history of philosophy in the 19th and 20th centuries, and the impact of communication technologies on the organization of ideas and on social and political organization. Some main publications: Tradition and Individuality (Dordrecht: Kluwer, 1992); “Electronic Networking and the Unity of Knowledge”, in Stephanie Kenna and Seamus Ross (eds.), Networking in the Humanities, London: Bowker-Saur, 1995); “The Concept of Knowledge in the Context of Electronic Networking”, The Monist, July 1997; “Towards a Philosophy of Virtual Education”, in M. Deegan and H. Short (eds.), DRH 99, London: King’s College, 2000; Vernetztes Wissen: Philosophie im Zeitalter des Internets, Vienna: Passagen Verlag, 2004. Further information: www.hunfi.hu/nyiri. E-mail: nyiri@hunfi.hu.

Gábor PALLÓ (1942), DSc, Research Professor at the Institute for Philosophical Research of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. His main fields of research include the philosophy and history of science, the 20th-century history of natural sciences with special regard to science in Hungary, in particular the history of physics and chemistry, migration of scientists, relationships between the cognitive and institutional aspects of science, and connections between science and philosophy, politics, communication, and society. Some main publications: Radioaktivitás és a kémiai atomelmélet: Az anyagszerkezeti nézetek válsága a magyarországi kémiában [Radioactivity and Chemical Theory of Atoms: Crisis in the Views on the Structure of Matter in Hungarian Chemistry], Budapest: Akadémiai Kiadó, 1992; Hevesy György [George Hevesy], Budapest: Akadémiai Kiadó, 1998; Žsenialitás és korszellem [Genius and Zeitgeist], Budapest: Áron Kiadó, 2004. E-mail: Gabor.Pallo@ella.hu.

Csaba PLÉH (1945) is Professor at the Department of Cognitive Science at the Budapest University of Technology and Economics. He is a Member of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, and its Deputy General Secretary. His main research interests are the history of psychology, language and cognition, and developmental disorders, especially the Williams syndrome. His most important visiting appointments and fellowships are: Center for Advanced Studies in the Behavioral Sciences (Stanford, 1996), Vienna University (1990–1998), Collegium Budapest (2001/2002). He is editor in chief of the Hungarian Review of Psychology, and former president of the Hungarian Philosophical Association (1998–2002). Some recent publications: “Ernst Mach and Daniel Dennett: Two Evolutionary Models of Cognition”, in Peter Fleissner and Kristóf Nyíri (eds.), Philosophy of Culture and the Politics of Electronic Networking, vol. 1: Historical Roots and Present Developments, Innsbruck: Studienverlag / Budapest: Áron Kiadó, 1999; “Modularity and Pragmatics”, Pragmatics 10 (2000); Cs. Pléh, Á. Lukács and M. Racsomány, “Morphological Patterns in Hungarian Children with Williams Syndrome and the Rule Debates”, Brain and Language, 86 (2003); Á. Lukács, Cs. Pléh and M. Racsomány, “Language in Hungarian Children with Williams Syndrome”, in Susanne Bartke and Julia Siegmüller (eds.), Williams Syndrome across Languages, Amsterdam: John Benjamins, 2004. E-mail: pleh@cogsci.bme.hu.

Gergő PRAZSÁK is a PhD student at the Doctoral School in Philosophy, University of Pécs, Hungary, and Research Fellow at the Hungarian National Council for Communications and Information Technology. His fields of research: the information society, social networks, the digital divide, and the impact of new media and communication technologies on social and personality development. Major publications: György Csepeli and Gergő Prazsák, “Paradigm Change in Sociology”, Review of Sociology (Budapest), vol. 10, no. 2 (November 2004); György Csepeli, Csaba Kucséra and Gergő Prazsák, “Európa, mint fölérendelt cél” [“Europe as a superordinate goal”], in György Csepeli (ed.), Emberek vetése, Budapest: Józsefvég, 2003. E-mail: prazsak@gmail.com.

Klára SÁNDOR is Professor of Linguistics at the University of Szeged, Member of the Hungarian National Assembly, Vice Chair of the Committee on Education and Science, and Member of the Assembly of the European Council. She has led several research projects, including “From Stigmatization to Tolerance” (1998–1999), and “The Cognitive Embeddedness of Linguistic Value Judgements” (2000–2003). Her research fields are evolutionary linguistics, including the effects of ITC on language, the sociology of language, especially linguistic stereotypes and discrimination, as well as language and gender, and language and politics. Her many published papers include: “National Feeling or Responsibility: The Case of the Csángó Language Revitalization”, Multilingua, vol. 19, nos. 1–2 (2000); “The Fall of Linguistic Aristocracy”, in Kristóf Nyíri (ed.), Mobile Communication: Essays on Cognition and Community, Vienna: Passagen Verlag, 2003. E-mail: sandor.klara@hung.u-szeged.hu.

Henrik SCHNEIDER is an alumni research fellow of Harvard’s Berkman Center for Internet & Society, a graduating PhD student at the Budapest University of Technology and Economics at the faculty of Economics, a professional management consultant, and founder and editor of the weblog, Hungarian Accent (Hungary.blogsome.com). His main research fields include: community content creation, the knowledge organization of online communities, telecommunications, media convergence, and knowledge obsolescence induced by technological changes. His main publication in English is: “Rapid ICT Change and Workplace Knowledge Obsolescence”, Harvard Law School’s Berkman Center Research Publication Series, No. 2005-04, <http://ssrn.com/abstract=870084>. Web-page: henriknet.com. E-mail: henrik.schneider@gmail.com.

Zsuzsanna SZVETELSZKY is Assistant Professor at the Department of Library Science of Eötvös Loránd University, Budapest, and a PhD student of the Social Psychology Programme of the University of Pécs, Hungary. Research interests: network communication, triangulization in networks, contemporary gossip research, network awareness, and self-organizing infocommunication. Some main publications: “A társas mezőktől a hálózattudatig” [From Social Domain to Network Awareness], Magyar Tudomány, vol. 167, no. 11 (2006); “The Emergence of Gossip: Effects of Networked Communication Technologies on the Evolution of Self-Organizing Social Beliefs”, in Kristóf Nyíri (ed.), A Sense of Place: The Global and the Local in Mobile Communication, Vienna: Passagen Verlag, 2005; Mindenki harmadik [The Third One], Budapest: Alibi, 2004; “Ways and Transformations of Gossip”, Journal of Cultural and Evolutionary Psychology (Budapest), vol. 1, no. 2 (2003); A pletyka [Gossip], Budapest: Gondolat, 2002. E-mail: szvetelszky@darwins.hu.